Guidelines for dangerous or restricted items

From liquids and battery-powered devices, to medical items and dangerous goods – there are rules on how certain items should be carried during your trip, if at all.

These are in place to not only comply with international regulations, but to also ensure the safety of each and every passenger.

Travelling with our partners?

If your journey includes a flight with one of our partners, your baggage allowance may be different. Baggage allowances on code-share routes are determined by IATA's Most Significant Marketing Carrier (MSC) rule. If you have already booked your trip, the applicable baggage allowance is shown on your booking confirmation.

Where a code-share or interline flight is part of an itinerary that begins or ends in the USA or Canada, baggage allowances and charges applicable at the itinerary’s origin will apply throughout.

If your journey includes a flight with one of our partners, you can find more information about baggage specifications on their websites.
